American Park and Outdoor Art Association
American League for Civic Improvement now forming the

American Civic Association

At the Boston meeting of the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, August, 1902, a committee was appointed to consider the question of a closer affiliation and a possible merger with the American League for Civic Improvement. The latter, at its meeting at St. Paul, a few weeks later, took similar action.

The two committees thus authorized met in joint session, discussed the whole question in all its phases, and reached the conclusion that merger was desirable and feasible. There were a great many interests involved, requiring their thoughtful and careful consideration, so that the two committees reported to their respective bodies in 1903 their conclusions that steps should be taken looking toward the consummation of the desired merger, but that final action should be postponed for another year, to assure harmonious, unanimous and effective action. The committees were enlarged by the addition of two members each, and the enlarged committees held a joint session in New York late in September, 1903. The action of this joint meeting was unanimously in favor of bringing about the merger of the two bodies at the meetings to be held by them in 1904, and further recommended:

First: That the 1904 meetings of the two bodies be held jointly at St. Louis.

Second: That such publications as could be jointly issued, should be so issued until the merger was actually accomplished.

Third: That there should be every possible interchange of courtesy and coöperation during the same period.

The American Park and Outdoor Art Association held a meeting on June 9, 1904, at St. Louis, at which the report of its committee was received and approved, and liquidating trustees were appointed to carry out the recommendations of the committee, President Woodruff, of the Association, appointing Warren H. Manning, of Boston, Charles Mulford Robinson, of Rochester, and Mrs. Charles F. Millsbaugh, of Chicago, as the Association's trustees.

The American League for Civic Improvement held a meeting on the afternoon of June 9th, received and approved the report of its committee, and authorized the appointment of trustees to carry out the recommendations of the committee. President McFarland was made a trustee by direct vote of the League, and he appointed as his colleagues Mrs. William
